The demand for the flu vaccine has spiked in the past few months, as people look to safeguard against the winter season, and an increased number of tourists arrive to enjoy the seasons here.

Doctors and infectious disease experts said they had seen an uptick in number of patients coming in for shots, particularly those who were residing in dormitories or working in the medical sector.

However, the physical centres continue to experience high demand. The demand for flu vaccines has increased to a peak travel seasons.”

Southern Hemisphere winter epidemics, which are similar to Covid-19, help to reduce the relative activity of the flu virus.

Medical director of Parkway Shen-

The remaining two imported cases were community cases, which were mostly linked to the migrant worker population. The number of new daily cases has remained at fewer than one case per day over the past two weeks, said the Ministry of Health (MOH).

Doctors and infectious disease experts said they had seen an uptick in number of patients coming in for shots, particularly those who were residing in dormitories or working in the medical sector.

The demand for flu vaccines has increased to a peak travel seasons.”

Southern Hemisphere winter epidemics, which are similar to Covid-19, help to reduce the relative activity of the flu virus.

Medical director of Parkway Shen-